
Danielle Bailey-Lash was not only the inspiration behind The Lilies Project, she was also integral in the planning of the art installations. Danielle also embodied the peaceful presence and courageous demeanor of John L. Hairston. Above all, Danielle was a model of how to build community. May we all strive to service others as graciously as Danielle did.

Walnut Cove is the site of a National Creative Placemaking Fund Project. Together we can come up with creative solutions to address coal ash, 20 million tons of which sits in the Belews Creek community.

WHEN:

January 1st, 2018 - June 30th, 2020

WHAT TO EXPECT:

Public Art made out of coal ash in Walnut Cove with accompanying art throughout Southeastern Stokes County

Quarterly Community Building Workshops featuring
Oral History | Visual Arts | Spirituals | Public Health
Environmental Justice | Renewable Energy

LEAD ORGANIZATIONS:

Stokes County Arts Council | Stokes County Historical Society
Appalachian Voices | NC A&T State University
